► WHY TAICHUNG?

The centrally located city of Taichung, with a population of approximately 2.8 million people is Taiwan's second most populous city and the core of the Taichung-Changhua metropolitan area. It is a gateway for exploring the island's mountainous interior, including nature areas like Sun Moon Lake, popular for boating and hiking. In the bustling city center of Taichung, there are museums, temples and the ornate brick Taichung Station, a legacy of the Japanese colonial period (1895-1945). The National Taiwan Museum of Fine Arts houses the world's largest collection of Taiwanese art. Taichung has several open-air night markets that feature local food and diversions. Taiwan's capital, Taipei is easily accessible in about one hour by bullet train.

► STUDY AT TUNGHAI UNIVERSITY

Tunghai University was established in 1955 and it is located on the level plateau of Taichung's Tatu Mountain. The university is well-known for its beautiful campus, and has 9 colleges, 34 departments with undergraduate, master's and doctoral programs. Tunghai University is

► ACADEMICS

Tunghai University offers both English taught courses with the general student population and Mandarin and Taiwanese language courses through the Language Centre. English taught courses include areas such as business administration, management, social science, literature and sustainability. These courses are offered in the fall and spring semesters.

The Language Centre offers a wide variety of classes, including courses for the absolute beginner to advanced student, and a Chinese Culture class. Students are placed in courses based on their Chinese ability and the course content. Courses not only help students improve their listening, speaking, reading and writing skills; the Center also offers newspaper courses, business Chinese and classical Chinese courses. The Chinese Culture Course introduces the student to Taiwanese languages, local customs, Chinese martial arts, religion, architecture, and the traditional arts. Classes will be five to seven students, with course content tailored to the individual learners.
